

ABSTRACT

According to the invention, in order to equalise and demodulate a data signal transmitted to a receiver via a time-variant channel, the scatterer coefficients (damping, delay and Doppler frequency) causing the signal distortions in the channel are determined from the received data signal in the receiver. In this way, the data signal is equalised and then demodulated.